Decision :

2. The second appeal of this appellant with similar subject-matter in CIC/MOMAF/A/2016/299601 was heard on 25.06.2017 and the same order is hereby reiterated.

3. The appellant who is Editor of magazine 'Alfaaz Today' alleged that many irregularities were noticed and reported by him against management of Dargah, and hence he was filing RTI applications. Appellant has shown several copies of his magazines wherein he wrote critically about functioning of the Dargah.

4. The CPIO complained that as the Dargah management could not give advertisement to his magazine, then the applicant started filing multiple RTI applications to bring pressure on authorities. Appellant claimed that he has right to advertisement from Dargah. The appellant should know that there is no such right. Dargah is not a commercial organization and there is no need to advertise. If any tender notice or any other requirement to be advertised they have to give such notification in such newspapers which have circulated in required area and fulfil other eligibility criteria.

5. As a journalist, appellant has every right to criticize the functioning of public authority. As a citizen he can also file RTI application. But he has no right to demand Advertisements for his magazine building pressure of RTI applications.

6. Appellant said that he has filed a complaint to Press Council of India against Dargah for not giving advertisement. As per the Press Council of India Act, even public authority can file complaint against journalist for unethical conduct, if any.
